Hey guys,

Still waiting on something from you guys. As an update, we had a homicide suspect the [redacted]s trying to track down this morning, who fled the scene with the weapon but we could not assist because the NDA language is still an issue. Further, the [redacted] sent out a memorandum to all of its [redacted] telling them not to agree to any NDA provisions. I think we can all agree that assistance to state and local LEAs put violent criminals away is a good thing, so with that in mind, can we please try and move to get something done so we can provide that assistance?

See the email below re [redacted] non-disclosure.

I am not surprised. I am going to forward this to HQ and let them decide how to proceed/if they are willing to make edits that accommodate their concerns. Alternatively, they can [redacted] deal with the requisite non-disclosures that way.

Whatever it is -- I am glad to have some transparency on this - shedding light on this is a good thing.

[redacted]

I have reviewed the proposed non-disclosure agreement and have discussed it with my [redacted] [redacted]. We have serious reservations about signing the agreement. Specifically, we are troubled by Paragraphs 7 and 13, which would preclude us from disclosing any information regarding the technology, beyond the results obtained, as part of our statutory or Brady discovery obligations, without first obtaining the written approval of the FBI. Paragraph 7 specifically precludes us from providing information about the technology "in response to a court order" without prior written approval from the FBI. The further restriction in Paragraph 7 precluding the use of the information in a search warrant affidavit could cause an affiant to mislead a magistrate and possibly result in the quashing of a warrant.

Additionally, Paragraph 9, would require this office, at the request of the FBI, to dismiss a case in lieu of providing discovery about the technology. We understand the FBI's concerns that revealing the capabilities of this technology could allow criminals to employ countermeasures to avoid detection. However, agreeing never to disclose the technology in discovery, even when ordered to do so by a court, without prior FBI approval, could place our prosecutors in a position of compromising their statutory and ethical duties. Agreeing to dismiss a well-founded case to avoid providing discovery could inhibit their duty to vigorously advocate on behalf of victims. As a result, we cannot sign the agreement as it is currently drafted.

Hello Again --

I wanted to follow up on our emails below. Have you received any feedback? Is there resistance to signing the non-disclosure or is it just not "on the top of the TO DO pile?"

If you could let me know what is going on in your office that would be great. The boots on the ground agents that are dealing with this technology are suffering as a result of not having this in place. In the interim -- we have been relying on an acknowledgement of the NDA – but it seems that can even be frustrating to obtain.

Thanks in advance to your attention to this.

Thank you for your attention to this matter. As we discussed briefly on the phone, per our policy we are obligated to have a non disclosure agreement in place when we share our technical equipment. (This almost always comes up when assisting the local police and using [redacted] to locate fugitives). Currently we are getting out non-disclosure notices to the [redacted] and your office on an ad – hoc basis at the time of the investigation (usually when time is of the essence). This is both inefficient and not really accomplishing what we wish to accomplish. It would be much more efficient for us to have a standing NDA with you and [redacted] when circumstances arise and we all need to be nimble – we don't need to be getting acknowledgments on something we probably all agree on anyway. Currently, we have a standing NDA with the [redacted] and I would like to have one in place with your office and [redacted]

A draft is attached for your review. I am not committed to having your office and [redacted] in the same document (although it would make things easy and my thought was if you were on board – considering the content – they could easily be on board too). Also – per our policy the [redacted]s supposed make the commitment – but if it makes sense for someone else in your office to be the signatory – please advise us on that.

If you have any problem with the content – let me know. My hope is we can work together to put something in place to make the lives of the investigators a little easier.

Thanks again.
